DO YOUR DUTY, SON.

How oft has memory brought to mind
One scene of long ago,
How oft I've heard a voice so kind
Speaking soft and low;
It was my mother's voice I heard,
While sitting on her knee,
And like the singing of a bird
These words she said to me:

"Always do your duty, son,
Though others go astray,
Always do your duty, son,
No matter what they say.
Whatever lot you choose in life,
Wherever you may be,
Always stick to what is right,"
Were her fond words to me.

As I go on in this world's strife,
Those words have been my mark,
At times I'm tempted from the right,
At times my skies are dark.
And when the clouds have all passed o'er,
I see the light again,
I hear her music as before,
The same sweet, soft refrain;

"Always do your duty, son,
Though others go astray,
Always do your duty, son,
No matter what they say.
Whatever lot you choose in life,
Wherever you may be,
Always stick to what is right,"
Were her fond words to me.

Be Kind and Love One Another.

Rupert was ten years old when he entered college. It was in the autumnal season when the stately trees had just been stripped of their gorgeous, brilliant foliage and when the fan of a spicy, odoriferous breeze was cool and pleasant. Rupert gained the confidence, love and esteem of all the students from the start. He was no superhuman person—only one of the real human beings, reared up by loving hands of a good father and mother—and he gained the love and good will of every one with whom he came in contact because he was kind and loving and spoke gently and mildly to all, ever conveying a warm greeting of genuine friendship. No matter if he chanced to meet a person a half dozen times a day, more or less, he would always meet him with a smile on his face, and would speak a friendly word to him before leaving him. Sometimes he would say, "Why, hello, I am so glad to see you. How are you making it?" and then quietly go on attending to his own affairs, realizing that he had done his duty as the feelings of his heart had directed.

Everybody felt happy in the presence of Rupert, for he was so kind and good and cheerful, and always had at hand something real nice and handsome to say or talk about. Of evenings you could find him in his room reading the bible—the most glorious book of all—or some other book of a religious character. A number of the boy students went one evening to pay him a visit and found him reading the bible with almost absorbed interest. Rupert told his proud visitors that he had been a constant reader of the bible ever since he had learned how to read; that he believed it was "a glorious book of precious truth," and that he always found great consolation in reading and studying it. Then, seeming to be aroused with fresh enthusiasm, Rupert said to his little friends who had come to visit him:

"What is most astonishing and impresses me most in the bible is the reading of Jesus shedding His own blood and dying for us all that we may have everlasting life. It is a remarkable evidence and striking manifestation of His love for us. And if He loved us so, ought not we to be kind and love one another?"

This little talk of Rupert had its effect and burnt deep into the hearts of his listeners. It was not intended for a sermon, but it answered and had its influence for good—all because Rupert was kind, and the little host that stood around him could not keep from liking him and lending him their attention.

Kindness is a commendable characteristic and has its charm. The little boys would visit Rupert often, for he was very kind and good and would treat them so nicely. Good parents loved for their children to associate with Rupert—because he was a kind, loving, all-around, whole-souled, good little fellow.

There was a damper thrown over the whole community when Rupert was stricken down with the fever and the doctors had given up all hopes of his recovery. Rupert died a happy death. It could not be helped, it was heaven's gain. The students were badges of mourning for several days. A reign of sorrow was spread all over the community. Why? Not because Rupert was dead, but because his acts of kindness and the smiles of his cheerful, sunny face were missing. From every deed of kindness emanates a golden ray of happiness. The procession that followed Rupert to his last resting place was a large but solemn one, and as it marched in silence with its priceless treasure, all faces were bedewed with tears.

Among Rupert's possessions was found an essay entitled, "Be Kind and Love One Another," in his own handwriting. Speak gently; be kind and loving. It is an easy task. Coldness, indifference and harshness kill the best and most tender feelings of the heart and mar the brightest and most admirable charms of beauty. It always pays to "Be kind and love one another."

Not a Tariff for Revenue.

When the Dingley bill was before the house the Free Press took occasion to remark that whatever else it might be it was not a revenue bill because it did not provide for any revenue. It looks very much now as if the same remark would apply with equal force to the senate bill. One by one the revenue features—er what were exploited as such in Senator Aldrich's programme—have disappeared. Senators have awakened to the knowledge that revenue taxes have to be paid by somebody; and they have begun to suspect that their own constituents may be among the number of those who will be called on. They must not all believe that the foreigner pays the duties on imports, but the most of them think they can make their constituents believe that fairly tale while they know by sad experience that no such shifting of the burden of revenue taxes is possible even in imagination.

It is a hard task the senate has set itself by its latest move, the task of satisfying the taxpayer, the consumer and the producer all with one and the same bill. We do not believe it will succeed. The chances are that it will meet with the fate of the father and son in the fable and in trying to please everybody will end by pleasing nobody. But if the senators will only adopt some kind of a bill, get the house to concur and then adjourn it will merit the warmest thanks of a suffering country. Sugar, thanks to its action, is going to be high, and there is likely to be a heavy deficiency in the revenue for the coming year. But these are minor evils compared with tariff tinkering. The country can adapt itself to almost anything in the way of a tariff after its experience with the McKinley act. But it cannot adapt itself to continued uncertainty.—Detroit Free Press.

Two Views of One Situation.

"This," said an able citizen, as he looked over the columns of his home paper, "is what I call a spicy sheet; it seems to be absolutely fearless and whenever it sees the head of an evil it gives that evil a crack. Such a paper illustrates the true mission of journalism; it is not only to educate the masses from dishonest people, and to correct abuses, this can only be done by aggressive—Hello; the blamed paper says I am utterly unfit for the office to which I aspire. Now, of all the contemptible, reeking, rotten, reprehensible newspapers in the universe, this is the worst. I never want to see a copy of that scurrilous sheet in my house again, and I am going to knock the shoulder-blade out of that grass-fed editor.—Exchange.

"For three years we have never been without Chamberlains Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in this house," says A. H. Patter, with E. C. Atkins & Co., Indianapolis, Ind., and my wife would as soon think of being without flour as a bottle of this remedy in the summer season. We have used it with all three of our children and it has never failed to cure—not simply stop pain, but cure absolutely. It is all right, and anyone who tries it will find it so." For sale by J. T. #### Wholesome Advice.

James H. Swango, who has been located at Memphis, Tenn., for the past year, is at home for a week's visit. He is connected with the Southern Immigration Bureau, of that city, of which Frank Trimble, formerly of this place, is president. He has traveled extensively in the Mississippi valley, and in the following summarizes his views as to the different sections:

"The country is full of rolling stones who imagine there is a bonanza in store for them just ahead, but like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow, it is never found. The average home seeker usually wishes he had gone just a little farther. As a rule the average home seeker had better stay at home. At all events he should know just what he may expect of the country in which he is to make his new home. In the past ten months I have traveled over 15,000 miles in 14 of the Mississippi valley states, and it is my belief that the southern farmer is thinking less of the hard times than his neighbors in the north and northwest. The aggregate wealth in the latter sections is far greater than in the former, but the per capita of money in circulation among the whites is far greater in the south than in the north. At the present time, and for some years past, there has been a large immigration to the southern states from Iowa, Illinois, and the adjoining states. The land there is very high, and the product of the farm has been below the cost of production, and this condition of affairs is forcing the poorer classes to a cheaper country. The west having been filled up, the tide is now turning toward the south, which, while it is an old country, is in many respects undeveloped. There are many people in this section that contemplate making a change. My advice after a year's experience in the land business is, that they stay at home unless they will be pleased with their new home. No man can make a living where himself and family are dissatisfied, and to sell out here and take the chances in a country you know nothing of is a dangerous experiment. True, the mountains are behind in many respects, and always will be, yet Hazel Green and her contingent territory compare favorably with a great many other countries. The prairies of Illinois and Iowa are beautiful and fertile beyond compare, but the creek farmer in the mountains is making as good a living here as he could there, and with one-third the labor. The old axiom, "Let well enough alone," is not a bad one. A few of our people have gone west or south and made fortunes, but the most of them have regretted the day they left Old Kentucky."

Pass Him Around.

A stranger appeared in town Tuesday and sat around during the day. Some thought him the advance agent of a moonshine still, others thought he might be a detective, and yet others conceived the idea that he was a foreign count in disguise for the purpose of capturing some of our fair damsels. Around and about him was an air of mystery, and his moustache was waxed and twisted in Italian. He engaged in conversation with several of our citizens of leisure and to each told—not exactly a tale of woe, but each so wofully different from the other as to excite comment on his veracity. To one he said he was a native of Owsley county, that he had been in Cincinnati under a doctor's treatment and that his father was to meet him here that night or Wednesday morning. To another he said he lived on Grassy, in Morgan county, and to others yet other stories. With each narrative he appended a different name as his apparently legitimate property, and the plot thickened the while. Night came on and he bled him to a room at the Day House, while the guessing gossips of Hazel Green sought their own domiciles to dream of detectives, murderers, etcetera and so on. Then night was succeeded by morning, but the porter of the hostelry where he was so snugly ensconced did not succeed in finding him in his room, and the landlady discovered that he had succeeded in getting two square meals, a bed, and away without pay.

Who he really was or whence he came are still among the unsolved problems that bother our population, and since his departure it has been intimated that he was probably identified with the gang of which Detective Drake captured three, mention of which is made in another part of this paper. He is apparently about 25 years of age, dark hair, gray eyes, medium stature and weighs about 140 pounds. He had on a dark coat and vest, gray trousers and black soft hat. He wears no chin whiskers and perhaps for the reason that his time not otherwise employed is devoted to the development of a dark brown moustache to which he seems ardently attached. It was twisted and curled not unlike that of ye old time dancing master and soaped to stay that way. He came here from Campton, and Drake evidently impressed with the idea that there was a mysterious air surrounding him interviewed him at that place Monday night but what he elicited or how far he was enlightened from the interview our man about town can not say. As he came he went, and the very atmosphere seems to breathe the query, Who and what was he, where from and where away? An echo answers—nit.

LEE CITY, Ky., June 17, 1897.

Dear Sir—The issue of THE HERALD of June 3 did not reach this office until today, June 17. J. R. CARROLL, Postmaster.

THE HERALD is mailed at the Hazel Green postoffice every Thursday evening and should leave here on all the mails Friday, which it does. Where the delay in reaching its destination is, we can not account for. Letters from our correspondents along that route are often delayed and some that we know of have never reached this office at all.

Dr. Nickell was called to see Rolly Gose, a son of John Gose, of Upper Grassy Sunday night, and found him suffering with a dislocation of the wrist joint and a fracture of the radius, caused by being thrown from a mule. He bandaged the fracture and reduced the dislocation, after which the patient seemed to be resting easy.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

For State Senator.

We are authorized to announce JOHN A. TAULBEE, of Hazel Green, as a candidate for State Senator for the 34th Senatorial district, subject to the action of the Democratic party.

For Surveyor of Morgan County.

We are authorized to announce JAMES B. HALSEY as a candidate for County Surveyor of Morgan county, subject to the decision of the voters at the November, 1897, election.

McKINLEY AND PROSPERITY.

James Creelman recently wrote the New York Journal from Cleveland and from his letter we take the following extract as an incident showing the desperate extremity which has overtaken the working people at the home of Mark Hanna:

"So black and bitter is the spreading misery in Ohio that native born mechanics are actually leaving their own soil to seek for a chance to earn bread in England.

This is the most terrible and impressive thing yet seen in the industrial and commercial gloom which deepens every day, and some of these poor fellows have been driven from their little homes in this country in which Mark Hanna has risen to wealth and supreme political power. Listen to this:

I strolled this morning across the bridge that leads from the noisy center of Cleveland toward Mr. Hanna's princely home on the shore of the great lake. Inky clouds of smoke whirled up against the sunlit sky. The glancing murk of the river was beneath me. I was halted by one of the local labor leaders who introduced me to a sturdy, deep chested young man, who carried a black glazed valise. He was an engineer. I never saw a better face, a stronger nose or chin, a clearer eye.

"I'm off for England," he said. "I can't get work in Ohio, and I don't want to give up my trade or be a tramp. Walk along with me, for I can't stand here or I'll miss my train."

We trudged across the rumbling bridge in silence for a few moments. I glanced at the exile out of the tail of my eye and saw that his eyelids were red. He had just taken leave of his brother.

"It's tough, he said, "I don't know a soul in England."

"Why don't you try to hang on here for a while?" I suggested. "The new tariff bill will become a law by September at the latest, and there may be some improvement in the conditions. It is a mistake to leave your country for a country densely populated. Her conditions are unfavorable to poor men."

"The tariff," he said, "bitterly. What will the tariff do for me in September or December or any month? It will make clothes dearer and sugar dearer and everything I use dearer. How will I be helped by that? The fact is I can't get a job in Ohio. The shops are closing down everywhere or running on short time. The farmers are all ruined. It will be worse next year. Wages are going down."

"If I can't get a job in my country I must go to some other country. A Democrat? No, I'm a Republican. I voted for McKinley, and I'm not sorry for it either. I think he is a good man. I don't know what is the matter with the country. All I know prosperity has not come, and is not going to come for a long time."

And so after that touching incident I took the trouble to follow it up, and learned that a great many engineers and other mechanics have been leaving Cleveland to seek employment in England. The local labor unions have received reports on the subject. Some of the men have asked for cards to the British labor unions. Is there a thoughtful man or woman in the United States who can read these facts without emotion?"—Lexington Argonaut.

BRYAN AND JEFFERSON.

It was most appropriate that William Jennings Bryan should address the societies of the famous institution of learning founded by the father of Democracy. The university of Virginia is one of the foremost educational centers of the country, and in its past career and present success Thomas Jefferson lives with more force, perhaps, than in any other of the great institutions of this country, to the construction of which he contributed so much.

There are many points of resemblance in the character of Jefferson and Bryan, and the latter is in every way worthy to lead the party which the former founded. No unprejudiced man can read the works of Mr. Jefferson, and the speeches and papers of Mr. Bryan without being impressed with the similarity of their ideas, their sincere devotion to popular rights and their clear conception of pure Democracy. Jefferson was undoubtedly the greatest Democrat of modern times. He did more to give life and vigor to the world-wide movement for Democracy, in its broader sense, in the latter part of the last century and the earlier part of this century, than any other man. Whatever there is of Democracy in America is due chiefly to Mr. Jefferson's teachings, and whatever hope there is to return to the first principles and the restoration of the power of the people centers in Mr. Bryan.

Jefferson was not only the father of the organization of the Democratic party, but he was a father of Democracy in its broader and more general application as a principle of government. Mr. Bryan is more than a leader of the Democratic organization, because he has declared as no other man has since Jefferson, the great truths of Democracy. There is also marked similarity in the political careers of the two men. Mr. Jefferson was a candidate for the presidency in 1796, and the campaign of that year was in many respects similar to the campaign of last year. The alleged better element of the old eastern and southern aristocracy, the influence of whatever wealth there was in the country at that time, the united power of the press and the pulpit were arrayed against Mr. Jefferson. To the cry of anarchy and disorder was added the charge of the most prominent ministers of various Christian denominations that he had become imbued with the spirit of infidelity and the other alleged heresies of the French revolution. The masses of the plain people were for Jefferson, but the popular idol was defeated. In 1800 Mr. Jefferson was again a candidate for the presidency, and was triumphantly elected, and with his election the existence of the Democratic party began, and the nation was saved from a backward step that certainly would have resulted in an oligarchy or perhaps the early restoration of monarchy.

In 1900 Democracy will celebrate its centennial jubilee in the United States by the triumphant election of the worthy successor of Thomas Jefferson.—Louisville Dispatch.

The Wells-Richardson Co., of Burlington, Vt., have our thanks for a double column electrolyte cut of the editor of THE HERALD. They are sole proprietors of Paine's Celery Compound, which, for nervousness and general debility, in our experience, has no superior as a tonic. No other remedy so readily relieves "that tired feeling" which is wont to make man query, "Is life worth living?" Nor is there any other nostrum to our knowledge as efficacious as an energy builder. Celery alone is a cure for neuralgia, rheumatism and their kindred ailments, and Paine's Compound alleviates the pain incident to these diseases, aids digestion and imparts vigor. After our experience with it we can confidently commend it to all who need new vitality, and it gives us pleasure to do so.

A dispatch from Lexington says: "Hon. Joseph Lykins, member of the legislature from Morgan and Wolfe counties, said here tonight that his successor would be A. B. Piesatt, a free silver Democrat. Lykins is a gold man and is much discouraged at the outlook in his district for the yellow metal advocates."

There are four of these gold bugs in the district and they should organize themselves into a party and fuse with the Republicans.

Mrs. C. F. Kash and Misses Leona and Stella Hurst were the guests of Miss Minnie L. Day Monday.

Hazel Green was almost deserted last Sunday, nearly everybody having gone to the annual "foot-washing" at Grassy Lick.

The oats crop in this immediate neighborhood is almost a total failure, a number of fields not averaging eight inches high.

John M. Rose and daughter, Miss Carrie, Misses Daisy Day and Mattie Evans went to Torent yesterday to see the sights.

W. O. Mize went to West Liberty on Monday last to take in circuit court and make some collections from the poor tax ridden people.

The fair is a sure go and all who want to secure advertising space in the catalog should send in their copy at once as the time is limited.

Miss Mary Ellen Trimble was on Monday taken with a very sudden attack of something like cholera morbus and for a time was thought to be dangerously ill.

Spencer Cooper, the editor of THE HERALD, has been confined to his bed the past few days, but we are glad to state that he is now improving and able to sit up again.

Rev. J. E. Deggendorf organized a Sabbath school at the Presbyterian church on last Sunday afternoon. All are invited to be present every Sunday and take part in the work.

Everybody is cordially invited to attend the services at Long Branch on the second Sunday and Saturday night before. The young divine, Wm. H. DeBusk, will do the preaching.

H. F. Pieratt had his livery barn whitewashed this week, and talks some of having his storehouse freshened up with a coat of bright paint, to be put on by the artist of artists, Sam Wilson.

The police force at Jackson has been reinforced and incessant raids are being made on the "blind tigers" in that town. The law abiding citizens of that community are determined to wipe out the evil.

Wm. H. DeBusk will be at the Daysboro church on the second Sunday at 10:30 o'clock, and in the event Eld. A. B. Stamper fails to fill the appointment at that time, Mr. DeBusk will conduct the services.

Dr. E. E. Bartram, the dentist who was here several months ago, will again visit Hazel Green the latter part of next week, and can then be found at the Day House for two weeks. See his ad. in this issue.

Secretary N. L. Ware of the fair association did a splendid piece of work in revising the premium list and purses. After submitting his schedule to the committee it was adopted without a dissenting voice, and Mr. Ware complimented for its completeness.

Topics for sermons at the Christian church next Sunday are "Woman's Record," at 11 a. m., and "Seeing and Doing" at 8:30 p. m. To both services all are very cordially invited. Sunday school at 9:30 a. m. The Bible class will study the first chapter of first Corinthians.

Misses Maud and Lelah Russell left for their home, at Clay City, Sunday morning, after a pleasant sojourn with friends in this section. In company with Miss Lillie Evans they called at THE HERALD office, and we found them very entertaining and accomplished young ladies.

The Sunday school convention to be held at Elkins chapel on Saturday next promises to be the most interesting ever held in Wolfe county. All who are interested in Sunday school work should be there and take part in the exercises. An interesting program has been arranged, and can be found in another column of this issue.

W. T. Whaley met with a severe accident last Monday. After putting up the new smokestack at Taylor Day's roller mills the derrick was being removed and a heavy piece of timber fell on Mr. Whaley's right foot bruising it badly but luckily breaking no bones. Mr. Russell, who was assisting in the work, had the nails knocked off several toes at the same time.

Business College.
The circulars announcing the Business Department of Hazel Green Academy have been issued by this office. The new department will open on September 1st, and will be quite an addition to this already popular institution of learning. The complete business department will meet the wants of many, and our Eastern Kentucky young men and women may now find just what they need to give them a good, practical business education right here at home. We hope many of them will avail themselves of this opportunity now offered. This is the first and only school in Eastern Kentucky establishing such a department, and it is in keeping with the spirit of the institution. Write to the principal of the Academy for circulars of announcements, and call the attention of friends and acquaintances to this school with all its departments. The cost of tuition has been put at the minimum.

Hazel Green Fair.
As will be seen by announcement to be found elsewhere in the columns of THE HERALD, the annual exhibition of the Hazel Green fair will be held on September 14, 15, 16 and 17, and promises to be the greatest one ever held. The list of premiums and purses has been revised and sums up a grand total of $1,800. Class racing on each of the days will be one of the features. Arrangements are on foot for a grand balloon ascension and parachute drop each afternoon. Amusements of all kinds and, in fact, the directors propose to have a regular "Midway Plaisance" or "Vanity Fair" in connection with the many other attractions offered. Don't let our farmers fail to come up with their big pumpkins, gourds, etc., as well as having their stock in first class condition, in order to show visitors from a distance what can be done in the way of raising stock in the mountains.

A Handsome Place.
The Academy Home is being put into first class condition for the accommodation of students at the next session of the academy. The entire building is being thoroughly renovated and modern improvements are being made. A fresh coat of silver gray paint has been put on the outside by that artistic manipulator of bristles, Sam Wilson, which makes the place have an inviting look. The lawn in front of the building is being interspersed with beautiful flower beds, and all in all it will be an ideal "Home" for all students boarding there during the next session of H. G. A.

The Hazel Green Drug Store.
One of the latest enterprises in business in our town is the opening of a first class drugstore, at the John Rose corner, by J. Taylor Day and under the management of E. E. Atkinson. Mr. Day left yesterday morning for Cincinnati, Louisville and other points to lay in a complete stock of drugs, toilet articles, etc., and says that he is determined this shall be the leading drug store of Eastern Kentucky. When he returns with his new outfit he will place an ad. in THE HERALD letting the people know all about the Hazel Green Drug Store.

The New Assistant.
G. Nelson Stevenson, of Prince Edward's Island, recently of Lexington, Ky., has been employed as second assistant teacher in the Hazel Green Academy. Mr. Stevenson is a graduate of Kentucky University and the College of the Bible. He is a teacher of many years experience and is also a preacher. We understand he will spend the greater part of the summer months in Eastern Kentucky preaching and soliciting for the Academy.

Misses Minnie L. Day and Nettie C. Wheeler attended the Baptist foot washing at Grassy Lick on last Sunday and while on the way had another desperate encounter with another large and venomous snake. Nevertheless they report a large crowd and an interesting meeting.

Henry Wilson, of Daysboro, informed a HERALD reporter that his bees began swarming Tuesday afternoon and that four swarms settled on one limb of a peach tree and he succeeded in hiving them all safely.

J. M. Havens returned Tuesday evening from West Liberty, where he went on Monday, and says he never saw business so dull anywhere as there. He didn't see even the distant shadow of prosperity in that community.

Misses Cora and Lennie Combs, Mrs. Lucy McGuire and her niece, Miss Eddie Daniel, have been visiting relatives and friends about Hazel Green for the past few days.

Wm. H. Cord is taking in West Liberty this week and advertising Hazel Green Academy.

LOCAL LACONICS.

Mrs. Emma Hanks left for Campton on Sunday.

Miss Minnie L. Day has been quite sick for a few days past.

Robert McLin went to Torrent Sunday on business and returned Tuesday.

Matthew Long, the young soldier-boy from Ft. Thomas, was in town last week.

Mrs. Roe Day has the thanks of the editor and his better-half for a basket of fine green peas.

The Sunday school convention held at Holly last Saturday was a pronounced success in every feature.

Miss Minnie M. Wallace returned home Monday from a week's visit to her sister, Mrs. Lizzie Byrd, of Grassy.

Robert Kash has secured a school in Lee county, near the Powell line, and will begin teaching in a few weeks.

J. G. Trimble, of Mt. Sterling, is visiting his daughter, Mrs. J. T. Day and other relatives and friends at this place.

Willie Kash has secured a school near Fincastle, in Lee county, and will begin teaching soon, but just when we do not know.

Mrs. H. F. Pieratt and family returned yesterday from Campton where they were visiting S. S. Combs, Mrs. Pieratt's father.

H. C. Quicksall made a flying trip to Lexington last week and after taking in the Fourth of July at Torrent, returned home Sunday night.

J. Taylor Day is in Louisville and Cincinnati working up advertising for the fair catalogue, and may return home the latter part of the week.

Dr. Nickell reports the birth of a boy baby to the wife of Miles Caskey last Saturday, and says he was a bouncer—Bill McKinley, of course.

The show last Friday, W. C. Clark's circus, was about the best exhibition of the kind that has been seen in this section for the last several years.

Mesdames Hanks, Harmon, Frazier and O'Hair left Tuesday morning for their respective homes, much to the regret of their relatives and friends.

Harve Nickell, the old time counter hopper, is now measuring calves for H. F. Pieratt, and would be glad to sell his old friends. Ladies especially invited.

Mrs. F. N. Day returned home Monday from Montgomery where she has been visiting her granddaughter and other relatives for over two weeks past.

Recent indications led us to believe that our clock tank would fall to pieces. The hope was large and the stakes high, but she's still up this week and tant as a drum.

Miss Mary Nesbitt, of Winchester, has been in our midst for a few days visiting friends. She will make an extended visit at Prestonsburg before she goes to her home.

Miss Rilda Horton accompanied her aunt, Mrs. F. N. Day, home and is now in our midst visiting relatives and friends. She is one of Montgomery county's bright young girls.

Mrs. S. B. Kash is just now in receipt of a brand new stock of the latest style hats, both trimmed and untrimmed, and invites the ladies of Hazel Green and vicinity to inspect them.

Several of our young people went to Torrent Sunday to spend the glorious fourth and have a good time. They succeeded in the first undertaking during a sweltering heat but failed to realize on the last.

Whether it's a stubborn cold or just a scuffle, you can cure it for good with Dr. Bell's True Tar-Honey. This famous remedy taken in time will stop the progress of consumption and bring the color of health to the pallid cheek.

James H. Swango, who was visiting his mother and father and other relatives and friends, left for Illinois Tuesday, in company with his several aunts, and after a brief sojourn in the sucker state will return to Memphis and business in which he is engaged at that place.

Miles Kash and two daughters, of Montgomery county, are visiting relatives and friends in this town and vicinity. They dined with Dr. Silas Kash and wife Tuesday, and have also been the guests of Dr. Mason Kash and Mrs. Ellen Kash, respectively.

Our young friend, Edward Oney, just graduated from Hazel Green Academy, has been employed to teach the public school in the Shekey neighborhood, Dist. No. 31. The trustees are to be congratulated upon the wisdom displayed in making their selection and the patrons will find that it pays to employ just the right kind of a teacher better than to take any that offers "for the draw." Eddie Oney is correct in all the attributes that attain to enoble young men, and his example and daily walk in life will be worthy the emulation of every scholar in attendance. He has the education to make an exceptionally fine pedagogue and if the patrons fail to get value received from him we are no judge of personal character or worth. He has a widowed mother and two sisters dependent upon him for support, and while he is rendering the patrons of this school district the very best service obtainable for the money, the trustees and patrons should in turn do all and everything they can to hold up his hands and encourage him in his new life work. Thus the patron, the pupil and the pedagogue may be materially benefitted and the public weal advanced.

At the Christian church next Sunday, the topics for sermons are, at 11 a. m., "Stephen the Martyr," at 8:30 p. m., "Cornelius the Good Man." New Testament Christians always assembled themselves together on the first day of the week. Paul says, "Neglect not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is." "Remember the Lord's day to keep it holy." It should be a day spent in holy service for the Master. Draw near to God, and He will draw near to thee. Drawing near to Him gives strength, comfort, forgiveness and his line of life. Attend the services at the Lord's house whenever possible.

Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Swango will please accept the thanks of the editor and his better-half for a freezerful of delicious raspberry ice cream. Whistling Willie don't do things by piece meal as demonstrated in this case. Instead of a saucer full he brought over the freezer full. When one realizes that Mr. Swango lives over a mile from THE HERALD home it shows that either the editor and his better-half are highly appreciated, or the paper wonderfully popular. Anyway we highly appreciate this little testimonial and can assure Mr. and Mrs. Swango that all connected with the office enjoyed the feast to the fullest.

Mrs. Nannie Kash has been employed to teach the school known as the Public Square, just below Hazel Green, and will call "books" on the 19th inst. Mrs. Kash taught this school last winter, or rather a subscription school in the building and rendered such valuable assistance in teaching the young idea how to shoot that the trustees employed her on her merits, in which they will not be mistaken. She is a patient, painstaking little lady and the scholars are all sure to love her. Wherever this is the case between teacher and pupil teaching is an easy task and a labor of love.

Some of the loafers sitting around Henry Pieratt's store a few mornings since, were led to discuss woman's dress, and all, of course, held different views. Some one suggested that a lady dressed in old fashioned chintz calico was as prettily attired as maid or matron could be, and with the suggestion ejected the query. Why is it that you never see chintz calico on the market any more? Harve Nickell, the new clerk, answered that he didn't know unless it was owing to the scarcity of the chintz bug. And the crowd let it go at that.

Mrs. Lillie McLin will please accept the thanks of the editor and his better-half for a bountiful basketful of vegetables. The lower tier of the basket was filled with a fine mess of fine peas, the upper tier with a liberal mess of tender juicy green beans and the top packed to the handle with succulent pie plant. When Mr. and Mrs. Robert McLin moved into our immediate neighborhood we congratulated ourselves that they would be good neighbors, but we had no idea they would do things so grandly.

Our young friend H. C. Quicksall has secured the public school at this place, and will open for business on the 19th inst. He taught us such a satisfactory school on a former occasion that any encomium upon his merits now would be superfluous, and it will suffice to say that he will render satisfaction.

Mrs. Ida Cecil (nee Swango), accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Jose Swango, was brought here Friday evening from her home in Virginia, and from Torrent to this place lay on a cot in the hack. She is very ill and much emaciated, but withal cheerful, and her friends hope to see the bloom of youth again adora her cheek.
